How to Get Here ☐ ☐ ☐

By Plane Almería's international airport is the easiest way to arrive in Almería, lying only ten minutes from the city centre. Direct national and international flights are run by 'low-cost' airlines.

Check on www.skyscanner.com , for example). Iberia has several daily flights to and from Almería via Madrid and Barcelona. There are also flights to Murcia, Alicante and Málaga airports, but be aware of the time and cost of the transfer to Almería by road. Bus or car hire are the only practical options, with the Málaga option being easier than Alicante or Murcia if you choose the bus. Journey Time from airports to Almería city centre by car:

Almería 10 minutes (9 km) Murcia 3 hours approx., driving west along the N340 2.5 hours approx., taking the toll road (approx 12€) to the N340.

Málaga 3 hours approx, driving east along the N340 Alicante 4 hours approx., driving west along the N340

From Málaga city bus station there are several buses a day to Almería (around 15€ oneway). The journey time is given as 5 hours. See the “routes and times” on the English pages at www.alsa.es. If you're considering an afternoon/evening flight, please check your bus connections before you arrive! From Murcia (San Javier airport) – not recommended unless you hire a car Murcia to Almería is easy with a hire car but much less so by bus: The airport is a long way from the city of Murcia – actually at San Javier, near Cartagena) and public transport is poor. There are three bus services a day from airport to the city, taking approx. 45 minutes (latbus company – see, for example

<http://www.alicante-spain.com/murcia-airport.html>

). A taxi from the airport to the city would cost about 70€. From Murcia city bus station there are several buses a day to Almería (around 17€ one way). The journey time is given as 3 hours. Consult “routes and times” on the English pages at www.alsa.es

. (Be aware that the connection between the airport bus and this one looks rather limited). From Alicante – OK for buses but there's a five hour journey – much less handy than Almería or Málaga. From Alicante city bus station there are several buses a day to Almería. The journey time is given as 5 hours. See the “routes and times” on the English pages at www.alsa.es

. From Madrid From Madrid, you are spoilt for choice, with regular flights (Iberia Ryanair, Spanair – lasting 1 hour), trains and comfortable bus services to Almería (both 6 or 7 hours). For other cities and timetables, see the travel and tourism section at www.andalucia.com

Taxis to a city hotel from the Estación Intermodal (bus-train station) in Almería should cost 4-10€.
